SOLVING THE FOOD PROBLEM

ANNUAL MESSAGE

DELIVERED BY

THE REV. DR. JOSEPH KRAUSKOPF

Founder and President of

THE NATIONAL FARM SCHOOL

ON THE OCCASION OF ITS SUCCOTH HARVEST PILGRIMAGE

October 3, 1920

I.

The food status of the United States is giving serious concern to thinking people. In this land of ours whose praises were, until recently, sung far and wide for its inexhaustible supplies of food, there are sections in which the want of it is painfully felt.

The dwindling of our food supply began two or three decades of years ago, when the exodus from the farm to the city first set in, when city attractions and high city wages lured the farmers' sons and daughters from their rural homes and rural labor.

Later came the war, and called into life gigantic war industries, at wages never equalled before, which decimated yet more the number of those who had formerly lived and labored happily and beneficially upon the farm.

Thousands of other farm lads were summoned overseas, or to camps at home, of whom but a small percentage have returned to the farm. Grown accustomed to living with masses, amidst the bustle and excitement of camp life, the resumption of farm life has no attraction for them. They prefer the city, with its theatres and movies and dance-halls. They choose to increase the number of food consumers by deserting the ranks of food producers.

The decline of our rural population is sadly in evidence everywhere. There are today some 6000 idle farms in Pennsylvania, and many of these are among the most fertile in the state. The number is larger in the State of New York. In the Middle West, the number is larger still. Many sections of the New England states are a waste of abandoned farms.

And all the while our great cities, feeding upon the life-blood of the rural communities, have attained unto colossal size. About one-tenth of the people of the United States now live in the cities of New York, Chicago and Philadelphia, while more than one-quarter live in sixty-eight other cities. Baltimore has more than half the population of Maryland. Seattle registered more than one-third of the increase of the State of Washington. Ten years ago there was not a single city in Texas of more than a hundred thousand; now there are four. More than six and a half million people have abandoned the country for the larger urban centers during the past ten years. Because of this decline of productivity in our rural communities, there is a shortage of 24,000,000 acres of wheat this year, with a corresponding reduction of other food products.

II.

This is a condition that calls for immediate remedy, if we would heed the signs of the times. Help cannot come from Europe. Even in pre-war times, European countries depended largely on our country to make up their deficiency in food. Before the outbreak of the war, England raised but one-fifth of her needed food supplies; France, about one-half; Italy, about two-thirds. Before the war, the United States and Canada exported annually about 200,000,000 bushels of wheat. Before the war, Russia supplied to Western Europe, on the average, some four hundred million bushels of cereals, mostly wheat. Today, Russia is starving for the want of food.

And the war has made matters far worse in Europe generally. It has killed or crippled thousands of farmer-lads and farming cattle. It has beaten untold plowshares and scythes into swords and spears. Cannons, shrapnel and bombs have rent and torn thousands of one-time fertile acres. Old men and women, or mere children, attempt, with feeble hands, to make unnourished Mother Earth yield food for her starving children.

These conditions over there can only make matters worse here. There will be a tremendous influx of refugees to our country. They are already coming, especially from the war-cursed lands. They will come to us by the tens and hundreds of thousands. They will come to partake of some of the blessings of our Republic.

Who can blame them? Would not we, under like conditions, do the like? There will be strenuous objection from certain quarters. Tens of thousands of unfortunates who, remembering that the founders of our country consecrated it as a refuge for all righteous people in need of protection and succor, and who are looking to our shores as their haven of escape, are in danger of seeing the bars let down and being left to starve.

Much in disfavor in recent years, the immigrant is a special object of dislike at the present time. Men fail to recognize our country's great need of him, the large place he could fill in this land. They think of him only as a keen competitor in the labor market, as one who is sure to increase yet more the price of food by decreasing yet more its limited supply. They think of him as one who is likely to congest yet more our overcrowded cities, thereby imposing a yet greater tax on our eleemosynary and penal institutions.

There is little remembrance that all that this country is, is largely the work of the immigrant. He it was that founded it developed it, fought for it, died for it. There is little remembrance of the place of honor and trust he has filled in every walk of life, from cabinet officer to commander, from mayor to magistrate, from judge, educator, preacher, teacher, to farmer, artisan, mechanic, merchant. There is little remembrance of the fact that there is nothing of which our Nation is of greater need than of the immigrant to develop our well-nigh inexhaustible resources, to till our broad and fertile acres.

III.

Are all our lands cultivated? Are all our farm-houses occupied? Is the productivity of all our lands exhausted?

Millions of our fertile acres have not yet felt the touch of plow. The density of population in our country is smaller than that of any European land, that of Belgium, for instance, is 671 persons to the square mile; that of the United States is but 33. Such States as Oregon, Wyoming, Idaho, Nevada, Texas, New Mexico, do not together average one person to the square mile.

I have travelled considerably, in recent years, through our Western lands, for the purpose of investigating agricultural conditions and colonization possibilities. I have visited farm lands and fruit orchards and cattle ranches. I have talked with farmers on their lands, entered their homes, broke bread with them at their tables. I saw farms that yielded per acre from 40 to 60 bushels of wheat or barley, from 80 to 100 bushels of oats, without the cost of one cent for fertilizer. I have seen gardens and orchards in which vegetables and berries and fruit were grown that yielded from $250 to $1000 per acre. I have seen farms, thousands of acres in extent, requiring extraordinarily large machineries 1or their cultivation, and heard farmers complain that, owing to lack of farm hands, the productivity of their ranches is diminished by one-half to two-thirds. For every one ranch cultivated, I have seen miles of them fairly clamoring for people to come and work them, and get fortunes in return for their labor.

Often, when beholding the bountifulness of these lands, and contemplating the sparsity of their population, and the possibility of their housing comfortably, and nourishing healthily, and employing profitably, the vast mass of people in the submerged quarters of the middle and eastern sections of our land, and millions of others, my heart ached, and I longed for nothing so much as that some of the objectors to immigrants, or that some of the hundreds of thousands of the submerged of our congested cities, might see what I saw, and learn what I learned. Were that longing of mine fulfilled, we would hear little objection in the future to the admission of desirable immigrants, and we would soon see a very perceptible and welcome diminution of the masses crowded into our Ghettoes and slums.

If we are sure of one thing more than of any other, it is this: There is urgent need of food in Europe as well as in the United States. Europe cannot raise enough for itself, much less for the rest of the world. We have all the land and more, and the best land possible, not only for supplying ourselves with ample food at a reasonable price, but also for feeding the rest of the world. Equally true it is that we have people enough to convert the untilled lands into bread-bearing fields.

Of yet another thing we are sure, and it is this: Congestion of cities brings with it not only a famine of food, but also a decline in moral and mental and physical health among large numbers of the congested. The crowding into the tenement districts of more families than they can decently accommodate, results in wresting them from a sane, wholesome and normal life, and produces the defective, the dependent, the deficient. In this class crawl the defeated, the despairing, the despondent, the rebellious. All these classes of people are deflections from the social order, the penalty for these is the large number of institutions that continually increase the burden of our charitably disposed, and the growing number of those who, believing themselves denied of their right to a decent living, are at war against God and society.

According to a report of the Tenement House Commission of New York, published a few years ago, more than 300,000 human beings live in one of the Ghetto districts in that city, within an area covering one square mile. That congestion has probably increased, since that report was published, by another 100,000, in these days of insufficient housing accommodations. Within the tenements of that most densely populated district in all the world, there are 250,000 rooms that have neither windows, nor any other aperture communicating direct with outer light and air, into which there oozes an atmosphere that is impregnated with the poison of putrefying filth, that infiltrates the germs of that dread white plague that counts its victims by the hecatombs.

IV.

And now, with our ever-increasing food shortage and accompanying high prices, Hunger has super-added itself to the other miseries of the congested districts. Most of the great revolutions of the world have had their origin in the cry for bread. Hungry men are desperate. Like necessity, they know no law. Fathers know no mercy, mothers fight like hyenas, when their children clamor for bread, with nothing but an empty cupboard to satisfy that cry. When that cry is heard, the cheeks of the well-fed may well blanch, and the hearts of the well-to-do may well tremble. It was the cry for bread that was the primal cause of the Peasant War in Germany, which swept mighty armies to perdition. It was the cry for bread that was the primal cause of the French Revolution. It is the cry for bread that is at the bottom of the bitterness of feeling that exists between capital and labor, between employer and employee, which at times finds vent in outrages as dastardly as the one recently committed in Wall Street. If we allow Hunger to stalk in our congested districts, it may mean Bolshevism in our country.

To be sure, the charities have labored to piece out, by means of alms and deeds of benevolence, the short-comings of scant wages, scant room, ill-health, bad morals,—but all to little avail. For every one they helped, a dozen sprang up requiring help. Never in the history of man have such enormous sums been collected and expended, and such hosts of people been employed, for the alleviation of the poor, as at the present time. The larger the annual collections for the Federations, the larger grow the annual deficits. Millions are added upon millions; buildings upon buildings are erected, organizations upon organizations are founded, for the care of society's diseased and dependent. And still resounds the cry: "More Money! More Workers! More Institutions!"

V.

The National Farm School has demonstrated, during the twenty-three years of its existence, that there is a cure, a cure which, had it been applied on a large scale, and widened in its application, would not have cost one-thousandth part which the other attempts and failures have cost, the cure that would have taken the poor out upon the broad fields, where nature fairly calls for them, where there is room, and work, and health, and wealth, and happiness, for many thousand times their number; where they might sit under their own "vine and fig tree, with none to hurt them, with none to make them afraid."

THE NATIONAL FARM SCHOOL has also demonstrated, in its twenty-three years' existence, that the young and the strong and the healthy can be made to exchange the city for the country, and to remain there contentedly. It has shown that many city folks are heartily sick of city life, and yearn for farm life. It has shown that city folks are beginning to see the physical and moral disease to which congested cities give rise. It has shown that city boys, who never knew aught of farm life before, can, within two or three years' time, learn to become self-supporting farmers.

Several thousand dollars' worth of vegetables furnished the Household.

Scan this result, achieved on less than 500 acres of land, by the labor of a little more than 100 students, representing entirely their own handiwork, bear in mind that these students are only learners, that almost all of them knew next to nothing of agriculture before they came here, that almost all of them were born and raised in one or the other of our crowded cities, listen to the reports of their happy and contented life, remember that all of them came here voluntarily, and remain here of their own free will, remember also that their number could easily have been many times as large, if we had had the means to house them and to provide for them—tuition and keep being free of charge to all—remember also that a little over 87 per cent. of them continue in successful agriculture after they leave here—bear all this in mind and then tell us whether or not farmers can be made of city dwellers.

VI.

But, even if we were able to house, here or elsewhere, ten times the number we now instruct, the main object for which the Farm School was called into life would not have been fulfilled. From the very first our School's aim has been not only to make of all its students farmers, but also to make of some of them heads of farming colonies. Our purpose was not only to enable a hundred lads or so to benefit annually from the instruction afforded, but also to make many of them gather about them groups of city men and settle them as farming colonies on carefully selected lands.

"But," asks the sceptic, "of what good will be men trained for leadership of colonies, when there are no colonies to be led? People of the overcrowded cities do not want to leave the cities."

There is some truth in such statements as this, but not as much as is generally believed. There are people, many of them, for whom city life exercises a charm which not even the rosiest picture of farm life can overcome. To them, rural life means dreariness, isolation, loneliness. To that class probably belong many of yourselves. You want to see the vacant farms filled to overflowing, but you want to see the overflowing done by others. No matter how poor some of the others are, their taste for city life is as strong as yours. They would rather starve in the city than grow fat in the country.

But, as there are increasing numbers of the well-to-do who are making their way back to the soil, so are increasing numbers of the population of the congested cities turning their faces in the direction of the country. It is there, and there alone, where they see their hope and salvation. The city spells physical and moral ruin to them. They crave for moral as well as physical health. They want room, sunshine, decent environments, a real human outlook, a taste of real family life, which they cannot find in the crowded Ghetto, or in the filthy slums.

And that longing for life and labor in the country will deepen and widen before long. The world is bankrupt, or at the verge of it. A staggering debt is weighing it down. That debt will either be repudiated or it will be paid, wholly or partially. If paid, it will be at the cost of an enforcement of the strictest economy. There will be a relinquishment of a thousand and one dispensible luxuries that waste the labor of tens of thousands of men and women. To live, these people will have to earn. With the other labor markets overcrowded because of a general shrinkage of demand for goods, and with luxury-producing shops and factories closed, there will be but one field open for obtaining the necessities of life, and that will be the farm, and thither they will have to go, if they will want to continue to exist.

But our doubting Thomases are not yet convinced. "You may succeed," say they, "in getting some of the overcrowded of the cities to go to the farm, but you will not succeed in keeping them there. What of the failures of past colonization movements?"

We are well acquainted with some of these failures. We know who started the colonies, who composed them, and how and where they were started. And we also know that, had they succeeded, their success would have been nothing short of a miracle.

If failure had been the deliberate object of the venture, they could not have succeeded better. By far the largest number of them failed because no chance for success had ever been given them. They were far more sinned against than they were sinning. Dreamers or visionaries, adventurers or land-sharks, were the organizers of some of them. Others were composed of impoverished weaklings, who were mentally and physically lacking in all things that make for success. Others had never seen a farm implement or tool, much less handled one, and could not learn to handle one, even if they had at their disposal all the years of Methuselah. Others thought that all that was necessary to start a colony is to get together a number of people, and place them upon farms. To fitness or liking or preparation, little or no consideration was given. Forgetting that the social instinct is one of the strongest in man, the colonists, instead of forming collectively village settlements for mutual sociability, were permitted to squat down on their own farms, at times miles apart, and thus invite loneliness, discontent, especially upon the women folks, who, in the end, succeeded in dragging the men folks back to the excitements and amusements of the city. Neither was much thought given to the condition of the lands that were to be farmed, whether or not they were fertile, well watered, properly located as to markets for disposal of products.

Yet other reasons there were why former colonization movements failed. Some of them were started on fairly good lands with fairly well-prepared people, people who, while richly possessed of brain and brawn to succeed, nevertheless failed because they lacked two of the most essential means for success: Funds, and Business Skill. I have yet to hear of a single Jewish Colonization Movement that was started by the right people, with the right people, on the right lands, and along right methods.

VIII.

Had a combination such as this obtained in the past, there would have been a different story to tell today. Scores of flourishing farming colonies would have dotted all parts of our land. Food prices would not have been as high as they are, for there would have been a much larger supply to meet the demand. Congestion in the cities would have been relieved by a withdrawal of tens of thousands who should never have formed a part of them. Our charities would not have been as heavily taxed as they are today, for, nearly all the ills to which they minister are progenies of the Slums and Ghettoes.

Had our philanthropies taken a different direction, there would have been few vacant farms today. During one year, before the war, some one hundred millions of dollars were donated in our country by philanthropists, for the purposes of higher education. For that sum of money, 20,000 small farms could have been purchased and equipped at an average cost of $5000 each, and these 20,000 farms could have, within a short time, supported, healthily and happily, 100,000 souls. And every cent of the money thus expended could have been made returnable after a few years, with interest, to the philanthropists, or to their heirs. It would have been a Philanthropy at five per cent.

Had that sum of money been donated for the training of lads in the science and practice of agriculture, such as is given here at THE NATIONAL FARM SCHOOL, the mere interest of that sum would have sufficed to make it possible for 1000 lads to exchange the thraldom of the congested city for the freedom of the farm.

Some day our legislators will appreciate better than they do now that our broad acres are our richest asset, that they yield more valuable returns than do all the gold mines of Alaska, or all the silver mines of Nevada, or all the coal mines of Pennsylvania. Some day, legislators and labor-agitators will cease speaking of barring the door to the desirable immigrant because of his present tendency to congest the city, when he might gladly join an agricultural colony if there were one to join, or if it were made possible for him to join it by reason of its being composed of people who are of his race, creed, customs, language, and the like. Some day our Government, instead of barring the door to a help-deserving immigrant, will take him by the hand, and lead him to the land, where he is needed, and where his labor will spell prosperity for him, and peace for the country as well.

IX.

Whatever the mistakes in the past, extenuations may be offered for them on the grounds of inexperience. No such extenuations would be warranted were similar mistakes made in our day.

It was a mistake to have allowed our cities to become overcrowded, and the congestion to breed all kinds of physical and moral and social disease. To allow our congested cities to become yet more congested by permitting refugees from recent war-cursed countries, no matter how unobjectionable otherwise, to be packed into them, would be a crime, for, on the one hand, such folly could only tend to heap yet greater misery upon the new settlers in these pest spots, who have already suffered more than tongue can tell or pen can write. On the other hand, it could only bring yet greater suffering upon those whom their own ignorance, or that of others, permitted to be swept into that maelstrom of misery.

It was a mistake to have allowed hunger to raise its head in a country composed of such vast and fertile and untilled acreage as ours; it would be a crime to allow that hunger to spread among larger numbers, and to give rise to economic and political and social revolutions, the extent and end of which it is difficult to foresee.

It was a mistake to have allowed the industries and commerce so to encroach upon the field of agriculture as to permit wholesale desertions of the farm, and so to increase the population of our large cities as greatly to increase the price of food, for the reason that there are more mouths to consume food than there are hands to produce it.

It was a mistake not to have adequately assisted to the farm such of our young men who, like those in attendance upon our School here, were desirous of devoting themselves to an agricultural life, but lacked the means for realizing their wishes. It would be a crime to continue shutting our eyes to our country's greatest need, to refuse to see that our salvation lies in training and fostering, to the fullest extent possible, a great army of food-producers, a real Army of Peace.

Having thoughtlessly allowed a food crisis to arise in our country, it would be a crime not to put our best thought to work to bring about movements that shall, betimes, ward off disastrous consequences.

And I know of few things that could be more easily effected than this.

It was my good fortune to spend my vacation last summer in the State of California. Of all the States I have visited in this country, and of all the lands through which I have traveled in my tour of the world, I have seen no state or country anywhere that made the profound impression upon me which California made. Favored by a climate equalling that of Central Italy, a climate that makes possible, in more than two-thirds of the State, out-door life and out-door work all the year round, blessed with soil than which there is none richer in all the world, flooded with golden sunshine almost every day in the year, decked with flowers that fairly riot in variety and color, capable of producing almost every kind of food that is raisable anywhere in the world, comprising an area that makes its size almost that of an Empire, bordered by a thousand miles of coast line, sentinelled by two vast mountain ranges, whose perpetually snow-capped peaks furnish inexhaustible supplies of water for irrigating vast and fertile valleys below, of entrancing beauty, that stretch some four or five hundred miles in length, and some two or three hundred miles in width, ornamented with gigantic forests, some of whose trees started growing before yet the foundation to the pyramids were laid, and are growing still, even though they have reached and passed the height of three hundred feet, and have acquired a girth, at the base, of more than ninety feet—such is the grandeur of the State of California. Little wonder that a traveling companion of mine declared that a wrong name had been given to that State, that it should have been called Paradise, instead of California.

Yet, despite all its grandeur, despite its unequalled fertility, despite its unsurpassed balmy climate, despite its vast area of over 150,000 square miles, despite an annual output in fruit equalling half of all the fruit raised in the United States, it is inhabited by but three millions of people; whereas, the Empire of Japan, that is less than two-thirds the size of California, supports from its own agricultural products a population of fifty-five millions.

Great as the world's demand is for the agricultural products of California, and rich as is the return from agricultural labor in that State, and easy and pleasant as that labor is, comparatively few have availed themselves of the magnificent agricultural opportunities it affords. By far the largest part of its vast area is unoccupied. Thousands of square miles of it are still a desert, prevented from being turned into luscious gardens by the lack of hands to till them, and to bring water upon them.

Invited by Mr. E. O. McCormick, vice-president of the Southern Pacific Railway, to be his guest, on a tour of inspection of lands throughout the State, and eagerly availing myself of his proffered courtesy, I had a rare opportunity for being made most intimately acquainted with agricultural conditions in that State, especially as we were accompanied, on parts of that journey, by an agricultural expert, and by men conversant with local conditions. Every day presented new revelations. Every hour afforded new opportunities for wonderment. Every minute almost raised anew the questions: "Why should there be hunger in a country that has a California to supply it with more food than it can consume? Why should there be heart-and-soul-deadening and body-slaying Ghettoes in the large cities, when there is a California to take them to her bosom, and give them abundance of health and wealth and happiness? Why should we speak of excluding desirable immigrants from war-cursed European countries, when we have California to house them, to employ them, and to make them amply self-supporting? Why should there be but 3,000,000 people on the richest, fairest, healthiest 150,000 square miles in the world, that could feed in abundance a population of more than a score of times its present number? Why should people live in poverty in the overcrowded East, when in the Golden West, especially in California, they could easily amass fortunes in agricultural pursuits, as tens of thousands of others have done, and as tens of thousands will do hereafter? Why may not THE NATIONAL FARM SCHOOL enter in the Golden West upon the second stage of the career outlined for it when it was first launched: that of becoming a leader of agricultural colonization movements? Why may not California, with the aid of graduates of THE NATIONAL FARM SCHOOL, help to solve our Hunger Problem, our Congestion Problem, our Immigration Problem, our Charity Problem, and a number of other Problems?"

XI.

Until THE NATIONAL FARM SCHOOL started, and for many years after, the public had no faith that American boys can be gotten to forsake the allurements of the cities, and take up their life-work on the farm, and remain there contentedly. With the exception of a comparatively few who cannot be made to believe anything which they do not want to believe, the general public is convinced of it today. A similar doubt prevails as to the possibility of making agricultural colonization movements a success. To remove that doubt, it is necessary for the general public to be shown that, when started by the right people, with the right people, on the right land, and with the right method, agricultural colonies can be made successful. Once such demonstration is given at a place easily accessible to the general public for inspection, the battle will have been won; one of the most needed movements of the century will have been inaugurated.

To that end, I would strongly advocate the starting of a Mother Colony, on a carefully chosen large tract of land, located not many hours distant from San Francisco or Los Angeles, and composed of graduates of THE NATIONAL FARM SCHOOL, these to apply there not only the trade they have learned, and have put into practice after their graduation, in various agricultural positions along the Atlantic Coast, but also thoroughly to acquaint themselves with agricultural conditions and requirements along the Pacific Coast. When these shall have become acquainted with the requisite conditions, and shall have personally put them to successful use, and shall have convinced the public that agricultural colonies can be successfully organized and operated, and made to pay, the next and far more important step is to be taken. These NATIONAL FARM SCHOOL graduate-colonists are to organize separate colonies, on suitably located lands, to be composed of carefully selected men, either of the congested centers of the large cities of the East or Middle West, or of carefully selected immigrants of European lands, or of both.

Our immediate concern, however, must be with the Mother Colony. That colony could be started tomorrow. But it cannot be started by the graduates. They have knowledge how to work a farm, but they have not the means to purchase and equip a ranch of several thousand acres, for the purpose of establishing a colony upon it, and keeping it agoing till self-supporting. The East has brought THE NATIONAL FARM SCHOOL into existence, has, for the most part, supported it during the past twenty-three years, has expended on that support fully one million dollars, has built up a plant which, conservatively estimated, is worth fully half a million dollars. And all that money has purely been a benefaction. Not a cent of it has ever been returned to the donors, and never will be.

Let the Pacific Coast inaugurate The Second Step. Let it organize the Mother Colony. It can well afford to do it. In the first place, much as it will mean for the East, it will mean much more to the West. In the second place, while the money the East spent on The First Step in the great movement of "Back to the Soil" was an outright donation, the money to be expended by the West is to be wholly a loan. The graduates of THE NATIONAL FARM SCHOOL ask for no charity, need no charity. There are dozens of places, at good wages, open to every one of them. While some have laid by a little money, and a goodly number of others have bought their own farms, and operate them successfully, they have not the means to purchase a tract of land large enough to afford a livelihood for some fifty colonist families, and to equip it sufficiently to make their lives comfortable, and their work profitable. What they would require would be for a number of people to purchase the requisite tract of land, the purchasers to hold it in their own name, and, after equipping it, to rent it to the colonists, at such terms as may make it possible for them to acquire it ultimately as their own, terms similar to those adopted by the Building Loan Associations.

No, it is not for charity they will ask; they will ask simply for Philanthropy at 5%. The purchasers will run no risk. Even should the improbable happen, and the enterprise prove a failure, the land would still belong to its purchasers, and, judging by the constant rise in price of California lands, the value of it would, in every likelihood, be considerably higher than the original purchase price.

XII.

So convinced am I that this proposed colonization plan is practical and feasible, that, if rightly launched, it will prove itself the forerunner of a great movement Back to the Soil, which will lead to a solution of some of the most vexing of our present-day problems, that, were my labors required to help making it a success, I would gladly surrender, in its behalf, my present calling, and give myself to it until a signal success will have been obtained. Much as I love the ministry into which I entered as student forty-five years ago this day, devoted as I have been to it since ordained thirty-seven years ago, successful as it has been generally adjudged to be, hard as it would prove to me to separate myself from the large congregation, which I have had the honor of serving for the past thirty-three years, still I believe that the benefits that would accrue to society at large, and to the Jewish people in particular, from a successfully established and profitably operated Mother Colony in California, and from the subsequent colonies springing from it, would far exceed those which could possibly result from my labors in my Congregation.

However, I do not think that the good and generous people of California will require me to do what they can easily do themselves, and very much better. They have everything requisite to make such a Mother Colony, and the other colonies that are to spring from it, a genuine success, and a success as much for themselves as for the colonists. Let the Californians but have the will to inaugurate the movement, and not many days will pass before they will find that, of all the attractions that draw people, from far and near, to the Golden West, not the least will be its agricultural colonies, composed of one-time Ghetto habitants and European immigrants.

GRADUATION EXERCISES.

February 22, 1920.

The Nineteenth Annual Commencement Exercises of The National Farm School were held on Sunday afternoon, February 22nd, on the grounds of the school, at Farm School, Pa.

The speakers of the occasion were Dr. Jay F. Schamberg, professor at the University of Pennsylvania; J. H. Hoffman, superintendent of schools of Bucks County; Clarence Sears Kates, of the International Institute of Agriculture, in Rome; the Rev. Dr. Joseph Krauskopf, president and founder of The National Farm School, and Bernhard Ostrolenk, director of the school. Adolph Eichholz, of Philadelphia, presided. The opening and closing prayers were offered by the Rev. E. W. Stickle, of Doylestown, Pa.

The date of the Exercises falling on Washington's Birthday, the affair took the form of a patriotic celebration, and in the various addresses, the fact that our first President was a farmer, was emphasized, and attention called to his love of husbandry, and of his farm on the banks of the Potomac, and agriculture pointed to as the basic industry of the United States, the foundation stone on which all other industries rest.

The presentation of diplomas was made by Bernhard Ostrolenk to the following young men, all of whom had completed the full three-years' course in practical and scientific agriculture:

Isadore Braunstein	Salem G. Fine	Abraham R. Katz
Julius Brodie	George Forman	Robert Livingston
Nathan Bromberg	Elias Fristat	Ira J. Mills
Sidney Brunwasser	George Goldberg	Aaron Moskowitz
Leo Buskin	Abraham Goldston	Max Rosenberg
Morris Daniels	Walter Groman	William E. Schneider
	H. Sumner Smith

Post-graduate certificates were awarded to Jacob I. Mannes and Morris M. Schlossberg, for one additional year in farm management.

A scholarship to the Pennsylvania State Agricultural College was awarded to George Forman. The post-graduate course at the School, as manager of Hellman Farm, was awarded to Walter Groman, as was also the Massinger Veterinary Prize. To Morris Daniels was awarded the post-graduate course as manager of Schoenfeld Memorial Farm No. 1.

Dr. Krauskopf, in closing the exercises, announced that all of the graduates were leaving the School to take positions awaiting them in different parts of the United States, as far south as Oklahoma, as far west as Colorado, and as far north as Michigan.

ANNUAL SPRING PILGRIMAGE.

June 6, 1920.

The Twenty-third Annual Spring Pilgrimage of The National Farm School, held on the grounds of the School, at Farm School, Pa., on Sunday, June 6, 1920, was made the occasion for the gathering of hundreds of friends of the School, who came from all parts of the country, and manifested their enthusiasm for the cause, their approval of the work that the School is doing, and their interest in the brilliant program of Exercises outlined for the occasion.

The speakers of the day were: Charlemagne Tower, Statesman and author, Former U. S. Ambassador to Germany, to Russia and to Austro-Hungary; Richard Spillane, Financial Editor, "Philadelphia Public Ledger"; George A. Cullen, Vice-President North American Fruit Exchange, one of Organizers and Heads of Food Conservation Department, Washington; W. J. Spillman, Professor of Agriculture, Chief of the Office of Farm Management, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, Associate Editor "Farm Journal"; Arthur B. Farquhar, Manufacturer of Agricultural Implements, Political Economist, Author; Albert Kelsey, Architect of the Pan-American Building, Washington, and of Carson College Buildings; I. C. Williams, Deputy Commissioner of Forestry, Pennsylvania; Norris S.

Barratt, President Judge Court of Common Pleas No. 2; Jas. L. Schaadt, Esq., of Allentown, Pa.; Joseph Krauskopf, President and Founder of The National Farm School.

The Exercises included the dedication of trees in the Patriots' Grove, planted in memory of service men who made the supreme sacrifice and in honor of survivors of the World War; the Consecration of Memorial Trees planted in memory of departed friends of the School, and of Festive Trees inscribed in honor of various joyous occasions; the formal installation of the Freshman Class, and the distribution of prizes to the students.

After an impressive invocation by the Rev. Abraham A. Neuman, of Philadelphia, Dr. Joseph Krauskopf made an appeal for increased support, so that more students might be accommodated at the School. He emphasized the purpose of The National Farm School and deplored the rush to the city from the country, stating: "It is no occasion for applause when cities announce the rapid increase of their population. There is a growing danger in the great number of people leaving their farms. We cannot overlook the terrible condition of a world's food shortage—a condition all the more to be deplored when we know there are millions of uncultivated acres—acres that easily could be made as fertile and productive as the 475 acres of The National Farm School."

Dr. Krauskopf then presented former Ambassador Charlemagne Tower, as Presiding Officer of the day. Mr. Tower, in taking the chair, complimented Dr. Krauskopf in conceiving the idea of an institution, such as The National Farm School, and praised the work that the School is doing in stimulating interest in a "Back to the Farm" movement.

He then introduced Mr. I. C. Williams, who delivered the Tree Consecration Address, in the course of which, Mr. Williams said:

"The planting of trees is one of the most satisfying ways of erecting memorials to the heroes of the American people who have fallen in battle for liberty, and who gave their lives to keep the world free. The annual renewal of the growth of a tree is an annual reminder of the freshening of the memory of those who have gone before, and that, while silent, the tree will ever speak to us, so long as it remains, of the devotion of him whose life and deeds its presence commemorates. We, likewise, joyously plant trees because they are reminders of events, or as milestones, marking the progress of the life of an individual. We have, therefore, like the people of antiquity, begun to enshroud our trees with a feeling of sacredness, and, while we do not in the same way believe them to be the indwelling places of the gods or spiritual beings, we do feel that they enshroud and maintain the memory of those persons, those events, those places to whom, or to which, we dedicate their being. No happier consummation of a life sacrificed to duty, or of an event which means much in the life of an individual, may be instituted than the planting of a tree, according it rightful protection, and nurturing it in life and growth, throughout the years of the generations to come."

Mr. Albert Kelsey, who was the next speaker, said in part:

"The sentiment of trees is what I like to dwell on most, and it is here more than any other place I know of in America, that trees are extensively used as memorials and are thereby given unusual importance and significance. What would many of the great structures of the world be without their green vistas and their green backgrounds of trees? Thus well may The National Farm School teach that trees are sacramental things—and thus do I come to you with all the earnestness that is in me, to assist at this beautiful annual consecration of memories and aspirations, symbolized by monuments which are not dead stone and mortar, but each a living tree."

Addresses by Judge Barratt, Jas. L. Schaadt, Esq., of Allentown, Pa., and little Loraine Lorch, were in the form of tribtues to the late Judge Henry N. Wessel, the late Mayor A. L. Reichenbach, of Allentown, and the late Murray Weinbeck.

Mr. Richard Spillane, in the course of a brilliant address, said:

"America has too many people in its cities and too few on its farms. It is likely to have this fact brought to its notice unpleasantly within a short time, when food prices go to heights greater than ever before. Dr. Krauskopf is doing a magnificent work at the Farm School. From a very small beginning he has built up a big institution in which young lads are trained in the art of agriculture. There is an idea that the Jew is not an agriculturist. He was an agriculturist in olden times, a great agriculturist, but centuries of oppression, centuries in which in Europe he was not permitted to own land, weaned him from the farm. From the flocks and herds his forbears tended in biblical days he was compelled to turn to other pursuits, to barter and to trade, principally.

"It may take long to overcome the effect of the centuries, but the Farm School is doing its part nobly toward getting some of these people back to the soil. There are few better equipped farm schools in the country. This School started with little twenty-three years ago, but somehow it has succeeded. Faith and sticking everlastingly to an ideal will do more sometimes than money. What would it have done if it had had the millions left by that great philanthropist, Baron de Hirsch? The de Hirsch project in New Jersey has been a failure. The Krauskopf project in Pennsylvania has been a success. Yet one had millions back of it and the other had only the heart and soul of a great and good man. People generally do not appreciate fully the work being done at the Farm School. It is bigger than they know. It can be made bigger. There is room for many more farms like it, but first this one should be made to function to the fullest."

That the success of the future farmer depends on proper farm management and the proper distribution of food, was the keynote of the address delivered by Mr. George A. Cullen.

"The farmer today needs to be taught marketing," said Mr. Cullen. "What the farmer needs is to get his products to market without the products passing through the hands of five or six middlemen before they reach the consumer.

A very impressive address was made by Mr. Arthur B. Farquhar, who stated that the food conditions in this country today are critical, and that if something is not done at once there would be a scarcity of food very shortly. Mr. Farquhar, who is eighty-two years of age, then told the audience that he was present on the platform of honor at Gettysburg, when Abraham Lincoln delivered his immortal address. He urged his hearers to study and follow the character and life of Lincoln, and closed with the immortal words of the Gettysburg address, as he heard them from Lincoln's own lips.

That the time of cheap food is past in this country, and that now is the farmers' opportunity for success, was the keynote of an address, delivered by William J. Spillman. He said: "For two generations our cities have been growing at the expense of the country districts. This movement toward the city has gone too far. Not enough people are left in the country to raise food for our cities. We shall probably realize this before another winter is past." He urged that the people of the congested districts of the cities should come to the country, and related the easy economic independence of the farmer.

Dr. Krauskopf read the names of those friends of the School for whom trees had been planted and inscribed, and the audience stood with bowed heads while taps were sounded in memory of those for whom trees were planted in the Patriots' Grove. (The list of names is published on pages 28 to 31 of this book.) The award of prizes to the students for progress and efficiency in their work at the School was then made. At the conclusion of the ceremonies, Rabbi Neuman offered the closing prayer and benediction, after which opportunity was afforded for visits of inspection to the various buildings and departments of the School, and to the Memorial, Festive and Patriots' Groves.

TWENTY-THIRD ANNUAL SUCCOTH HARVEST PILGRIMAGE.

OCTOBER 3, 1920.

A day of rare autumnal beauty, grounds in a splendid state of cultivation and landscapes in a riot of color, greeted the vast concourse of people, who made the Pilgrimage to the grounds of The National Farm School, on Sunday, October 3, 1920, to participate in the Twenty-third Annual Succoth Harvest Festival of the Institution.

The morning exercises were held in Segal Hall, which had been charmingly decorated with products of the fields, while the speakers' platform had been converted into a Succah adorned with fruits, vegetables and flowers, raised by the hands of the students.

The speakers of the day were: William C. Sproul, Governor of Pennsylvania; Louis Marshall, New York, President American Jewish Committee, President Jewish Theological Seminary of America, President New York State College of Forestry; Fred Rasmussen, Secretary of Agriculture of Pennsylvania; Simon R. Cohen, Rabbi, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Bernhard Ostrolenk, Director of The National Farm School, and Joseph Krauskopf, President and Founder of The National Farm School.

The Exercises were opened with an invocation by Rev. A. J. Feldman, of Philadelphia, after which Mr. H. B. Hirsh, Vice-President of the School, presented Governor Sproul as presiding officer of the Exercises.

Governor Sproul, in accepting the Chairmanship, spoke of the great future of agriculture and of the School itself. "I believe we are liable to become overbalanced industrially if we allow agriculture to continue to decline," said the Governor. "We must do something to build up agriculture. When the Hebrews and Quakers work together, as they do now, in agriculture, I believe the great work will benefit, and I can see during the next ten years a great future for the graduates of The National Farm School. I am amazed at what has been accomplished at the Farm School on the small amount of money donated by State appropriation.

"In Pennsylvania and New York there has been a decrease of population in almost every agricultural county. In Pennsylvania we are trying to make agriculture more of a systematic business and one more pleasant for people to work it. I am mightily interested in this organization, and I wish that many more young men could have the advantage of this work."

Governor Sproul then presented Dr. Jos. Krauskopf, President of the School, who in opening his address, expressed great sorrow at the passing away of Jacob H. Schiff. Dr. Krauskopf stated that a tree on the School grounds will be dedicated to the memory of the philanthropist next spring, and his appeal for a silent tribute was followed by an impressive moment of solemn silence by the assemblage. Dr. Krauskopf then delivered his Annual Message, printed in full on pages 5 to 21 of this book.

The next speaker was Mr. Louis Marshall, who, in a very interesting address, declared that one of the greatest crimes committed in history was when the Jews were compelled to live in restricted areas, and not permitted to own agricultural land.

"Dr. Krauskopf's remedy is a sound one," he said. "The movement towards the cities has grown to an alarming extent. Radical measures are needed. In every corner of the world hunger is stalking in at the door. There is no solution, except by agriculture. We have got to go back to stock raising, to sheep raising, poultry yards and orchards. We've got to build up and grow forests. A wonderful work had been done here by the efforts to bring back the Jewish people to the land. To-day we sit under a modern Succah. The time has come when the Jewish people must again become an agricultural people. In this laboratory trained missionaries are being raised up to go out among the people and give them the word."

A short recess was then announced, during which an informal reception and luncheon were tendered the guests of honor in Lasker Hall, and opportunity for inspection of the School afforded the visitors.

The afternoon session was held on the beautiful lawn fronting Segal Hall, and the grouping of the more than one thousand visitors, seated in a semi-circle facing the speakers, was made an especially attractive picture in the setting afforded by the glorious day.

Governor Sproul again took charge of the Exercises and introduced Dr. Simon R. Cohen, who in an address of much eloquence, made an earnest plea for the enlargement of the work of spreading agricultural schools throughout the country. He advocated a more liberal sentiment in farming communities in the direction of providing such entertainment as would take away the lure of city life, which causes in large measure the exodus of the farming people to the cities.

Secretary of Agriculture Rasmussen, of Pennsylvania, held the interest of his audience during an impressive address, in which he spoke in complimentary terms of the steps taken by the School in the "back to the farm" movement; and, in reviewing the agricultural situation of the present day, told of the financial and physical remuneration to be gained by becoming farmers.

Prof. Ostrolenk, Director of the School, after appealing for increased financial aid for the School, presented his Annual Report, published in full on pages 40 to 45 of this book. Following this, officers and members of the Board were elected for the ensuing year.

One hundred and seventy-five dollars, contributed by friends of the School for the purpose, were then distributed as prizes to students for special honors, the first prize of $25 being awarded to Robert Livingston.

REPORT OF THE DIRECTOR.

BERNHARD OSTROLENK.

On the six million farms in the United States, there are listed today, exclusive of the farmers themselves, a total of two million farm laborers. In other words, only one out of every three farms has a helper. To those who are statistically minded, this graphically illustrates the condition the modern farmer faces from the standpoint of help. It shows why the farmer is wasteful with his land, which he cannot give the fullest attention. It shows why the farmer often cannot harvest his crops during the most advantageous periods. It gives a clue to the causes of wholesale desertion of farms and the reduction of medium-sized farms into smaller, less profitable areas. More than all, it accounts for the relatively low yields in this country, as compared to other countries doing agriculture on similarly virgin soil, and doing it on a large scale. Thus, while crop yields of wheat have reached a maximum average of 14.8 bushels, such countries as New Zealand record averages of 31 bushels; Ontario, 21 bushels; Manitoba, 18 bushels; to say nothing of Germany, with 31 bushels, and the United Kingdom with 32 bushels.

The shortage of farm help is reflected in the avalanche of letters that reach us at the slightest hint to the public that we might have a few graduates available. By actual count over three hundred and fifty requests for graduates of The National Farm School were received last spring, when we graduated a pitifully small class of only twenty-two students.

The shortage of farm help has caused farmers to turn to machinery for assistance in the solution of the help problem. Tractors, power harvesters of corn, grain and hay are increasingly finding their way, even to the moderately sized farms in the east. The letters coming to us asking for farm assistants increasingly ask for students competent to run machinery of the most complex type. Knowledge of operating tractors has become practically a standard qualification. I regret to say that in this training we are not fully meeting the demand. Our Board saw the trend towards power machinery several years ago, and some machinery, including two tractors, was purchased and has done excellent work in giving training along the most essential lines. But progress in this direction has been rapid, and we have not kept pace. I speak of this matter with the utmost diffidence. I have sat in Board and Budget meetings and have seen appropriations made far in excess of available funds. Facing deficits of several thousand dollars each quarter on the one hand, and noting on the other hand, the large number of applicants for admission to Farm School and the demand of the country for our graduates, the Board has met the problem with courage and patriotism. It has authorized the filling up of the School with students and the proper maintenance and teaching of those that are here. Knowing all these things, it is with diffidence that I call your attention to the fact that new conditions demand new and heavy outlays in purchasing machinery and the istallation of a mechaical department, for the training of our students along this line. Like many departments in a school of this type, the need of this department does not arise from the needs of our farms. The machinery will not increase our yields, and will not be productive in any way. We do not need them from the standpoint of farming. In fact their maintenance will be an additional expense. Their need arises solely for the proper instruction of our students.

The pressing needs of the School from the standpoint of responding to the demands of those who want men trained in this line, coupled with the compromises it was constantly necessary to make because of limited funds, have made it difficult to bear in mind the equally important problem of general training given our students. The combination of training hand and mind is only too slowly being adopted by the American Public School system. Irrespective of the agricultural training, I wish to emphasize the need of hand training given here as a stimulant to mind and as a factor in social efficiency. Students come here, versed in a Public School knowledge of art, but with no knowledge that art is definitely associated with the neatness of a room. Many can do intricate problems in algebra, but are unable to measure the tail-board of a wagon with any degree of accuracy. Students come here well instructed in the habits of Protoza, but with no idea that the watering and feeding of a horse must be regular.

Teaching the students how to groom a horse or to milk a cow or to feed stock has a definite reaction to mental training. In contact with the practical things, the student begins to observe much that, in his theoretical knowledge of the subject, escaped him. The amount of supervision and instruction the average student needs to gain skill in some of the very simple operations of agriculture, is incredible. On the other hand, it is remarkable with what speed many students can acquire knowledge of the most complex operations and the most intricate machinery, once the fundamentals have been mastered.

The ideals of teaching in the molding of character, the development of good citizenship, and the proper social attitude have been kept in mind in the development of the curriculum, and have had no small part in the training of our students.

With all this variegated life at the School in which we are endeavoring to turn out all-around men of value to themselves and to the nation, it must not be forgotten that the guiding force and inspiration must come from the faculty of the School. No small part of our problem is to develop and retain a faculty here that has vision, force and training. The Farm School has been unusually fortunate in securing men of this type to carry on its work. It is to the interest of the School to retain the good men who become more valuable to us every year. One of the imperative needs that the School will have to face shortly is the provision of adequate homes for such of the married members of the faculty who occupy the more important positions. I regret to say that the lack of such housing facility has been responsible for the loss of some of our ablest men.

Splendid as is the record of our graduates, we are increasingly coming to see the need of developing some kind of organized aid to such of the men who wish to purchase farms. While it may be argued that the function of a school is to educate, and that students must look out for themselves after graduation, a policy pursued by virtually every school and college in the United States, the Board has, nevertheless, felt that the objects of the School can best be preserved by considering our graduates as sons of The National Farm School, even after graduation. When it is remembered that the average farm in the United States, according to the census, demands an investment of $26,000, the problem facing our graduates who wish to go into farming for themselves can be appreciated. The Board has taken up this problem and, through a committee of most able business men with broad sympathies and vision, is endeavoring to work out a scheme of graduate assistance. The scheme involves no gifts to graduates, but merely assistance by credit, along sound financial lines. While the School can proudly point to scores of graduates who have achieved their own farms, without such aid, it is hoped to accellerate the movement farmward, by our graduates, if they definitely understand that acquisition of a farm is not virtually hopeless, unless they can receive financial backing from a wealthy relative or friend. I am persuaded that such a post-graduate policy will add much to the efficiency of the School.

The development of the physical plant of the School has continued throughout the year. On the Home Farm continued attention was given to the development of cows for advanced registry. The making of record milk production has its value in stimulating interest in breeding and feeding. The annual Federal inspection for tuberculin cows failed to reveal a single animal infected.

Schoenfeld Farms, Nos. 1 and 3, and the Hellman Farm continued in their records of crop production. An imported Percheron stallion, the gift of Mrs. Edward Morrell, has added another interest to Farm No. 3. New tractors were added to Farm No. 3 and to the Hellman Farm. A new thresher has helped much in expeditious threshing of grain, and teaching interest.

The Horticulture Department continues to be the center of interest for both students and visitors to the School. As never before, students are clamoring for opportunities to specialize in this work. The large scale production inaugurated by the department gives it the romance of a developing industry. Besides the 2354 crysanthemums that have already been sold up to date, the inventory of the greenhouses at the present time comprises the following: 1850 carnations coming into bloom, 1960 calla lilies, 1500 snap dragons, 2500 Friesia plants, 4600 tulip bulbs, 2500 hyacinths, 450 geraniums rooted, with provisions for 2000 more plants, 1000 paper white narcissus, ½ section of sweet peas and 200 square feet of mushroom. In addition to this splendid record, the department enlarged its glass area by 400 square feet, making use of a portion of the Hirsh Botanical Laboratory. The cold frames were doubled in size.

Without exception, this year has been the most successful one for the Poultry Department, since its inauguration. The department attempts to teach the science of Poultry Husbandry in the classroom, and "chicken raising for profit" in the practical work. The contention that the teaching of agriculture being of necessity a training for a livelihood, can the better be taught by a thorough practical training supplemented by theory, is nowhere better illustrated than in this department.

The expansion of the Poultry Department and the work it is doing are beginning to bear fruit, in that a number of our recent graduates are slowly establishing poultry plants of their own, and a greater number of our students are manifesting enthusiasm for this industry. The plant is, in fact, inadequate to handle the many applications from students for the privilege of specializing in Poultry Culture. While improvements, such as the installation of electricity and a water system last summer, greatly increase our efficiency, we constantly feel the pressing need of another laying house to accommodate 1500 more layers and an incubator that would double our capacity, to answer this appeal of our students.

Following is a summary of the year's production of the Poultry Department:

1982 " " consumed	2240 " " consumed
480 " " used for hatching
	3754 " " produced
8250 " " produced

3500 chickens were hatched, of which 534 were sold, and 760 transferred to Farm No. 3.

218 head of breeding stock were sold.

Two new departments have been organized during the year, one of which is the Department of Arboriculture, under whose charge all the trees of the institution have been placed. The new department is taking charge of the Memorial Trees, the fruit orchards, shade trees, shrubbery and the nursery, as well as spraying, pruning and tree propagation.

The other department organized is the Purchasing Department. All purchases have been centralized, and a rigid departmental requisition system has been adopted. This new department has already justified its existence.

REPORT OF THE LADIES' AUXILIARY BOARD.

MRS. BERNARD KOHN, Chairman.

The Ladies' Auxiliary Board reports again at the end of the year, their continued and sustained interest in the Farm School. They have visited regularly and faithfully, and their suggestions to improve the household efficiency have been carried out whenever possible.

It is with great regret that we announce the resignation of Mrs. Alfred M. Klein, as chairman of the Board. Her conscientious and untiring efforts have inspired all of us, and it has been a real pleasure and stimulus to work under her pleasant guidance. Fortunately, she still remains active on the Board, and while we will miss her leadership, it will be a great pleasure to co-operate with her, and have the advantages of her experience.

Miss Churchman, the matron, reports that 1948 half-gallon jars of fruits and vegetables were canned for winter use, and 350 glasses of jelly were prepared, quite a gain over last year, owing to the fact that sugar was more plentiful and cheaper. Only fruits and vegetables raised on the farm were used.

The Sewing Circle, with Mrs. Schoneman and Mrs. Goldsmith in charge, is doing good work, restocking the linen room, and we extend our grateful thanks to the various ladies' societies throughout the country who are assisting in this work, by donations of material and money.

Besides the moving pictures, which are shown weekly at the Farm School, the Ladies' Board is planning to give a number of entertainments, the Play and Players Club producing a play for the Thanksgiving holidays, another to be given around the Christmas period, to help enliven the winter existence of both faculty and students.

The Ladies' Board still feels strongly that the solution of many of the household problems of The National Farm School will only be reached, when the teaching staff and faculty will occupy their own homes built on the School grounds, and wishes to appeal to the friends of the School for funds to erect such homes.

REPORT OF THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION.

CECIL J. TOOR, Secretary.

At the Fourth Annual Meeting and Banquet of The National Farm School Alumni Association, held at the Court Inn, in Doylestown, Pa., on June 5, 1920, transactions, epochal in nature, occurred, which may lead the students and graduates of the School into other trends of thought than have prevailed in the past.

Doctor Krauskopf, the Board of Managers, and the Faculty, have hitherto, and are still, preaching to the students and graduates, doctrines of appropriation; doctrines that have for their keynote the thought of " getting out of the School all there is in it," asking no reward but that we become men successful in agriculture. In fact, to use Doctor Krauskopf's own words: "The National Farm School is yours; take it; use it! We ask nothing but that the efficient use of this institution in your hands may inculcate seeds that may sometime sprout and grow into plants that will be of benefit to human kind."

When one considers that, in order to own a farm of his own, a graduate requires considerable capital, and, as the average young man that enters this School is of a type whose financial facilities are poor, the accumulation of such capital becomes a necessity. Inasmuch as the average wages paid farm helpers are from $40 to $100 per month, we can readily understand that a number of years are required for this accumulation. Couple this with the fact that the School has graduated but nineteen classes and that the early classes were small, I can surely be exempt from any thought of boasting when I say that we are giving Dr. Krauskopf and all the men associated with him, their own reward.

However, we have long felt that merely making a success of oneself is not a sufficient monument of the appreciation we graduates have for what the School has done for us, and so, at the Fourth Annual Meeting and Banquet of the Alumni Association there was launched a drive for a $50,000 Alumni Hall, to be presented to the School.

Pledge cards were distributed, and subscriptions totalling $12,175 were collected, these pledges covering payments of 10 per cent. yearly, until paid in full.

Inasmuch as but forty-three cards have been received to date, and as I believe this will be seen by all the graduates with whom we are in touch, I wish to make this an appeal to those who have not pledged as yet, to join us in the privilege of exhibiting, in some basic form, the love and appreciation we all have for our Alma Mater.

The following is a list of the pledges and payments made:

Noted Scientists APPROVE OF Gas Lighting

Scientific experiments by noted investigators prove that gas lighting improves the air for breathing purposes by helping ventilation, destroying germs and adding necessary moisture.

Scientists also know that modern gas light is best for the eyes, because it is so soft, mellow, free from glare and harmful color rays.

The Bureau of Standards, at Washington, refers in detail to the economy and quality of gas mantle light in a report entitled "Measurements for the Household."

See the display of modern gas lights at any of our Philadelphia showrooms.

(Antiseptic Solution)

IS NOT merely a mouth-wash, though a most agreeable and efficient preparation for such use. It is excellent for use internally or anywhere about the body where a mild antiseptic is desired. It is just the thing to use in connection with cuts, abrasions of the skin, etc., where there is a possibility of infection.

The user of FORMOLID finds abundant occasions.

GRIND WHOLE WHEAT

For Health and Economy. Cut down in food bills. Eat real whole cereals, not a millers' mixture.

Manufactured graham flour does not usually contain the outer skin of the kernel known as bran, because it is lost in converting it into flour. The bran is an essential to the flour because it contains the digestive qualities of the grain. To be able to obtain it freshly ground adds greatly to its nutrition and reduces its cost 50 per cent. This can be done on the QUAKER CITY MILL. You can grind (fine or coarse) wheat, corn, rye, peanut butter, nuts, vegetables, cocoa, spices, etc.

Price, $6.00, C. O. D. if desired; fully guaranteed

For Your Children's Sake

You have planned to give them advantages, education, help over the rough spots of life—but have you realized that the dominant factor in forming your child's character is the home?

Perhaps some have taken too much for granted—perhaps we have even slighted home comfort to finance the future schooling.

Environment during the youngster's days is shaping the man. The home atmosphere is wholesome, of course; but is it made cheerful by electric lighting? Is the light adequate so as not to strain the young eyes? Has the mother freedom from household duties that she can give the companionship and care she should to her little one?

Today electric service in the home means the desirable environment and freedom from household drudgery and decided economy as well.
